What is a cash box & lock box? Cash Boxes and Lock Boxes are used for temporary storage of cash during the day. Made of steel, these lock boxes are not used for overnight storage of cash unless you put the box inside a more secure safe. Typical uses are storage of petty cash, teller or wait person start-up cash and for retail over-the-counter sales. What is a combination lock Cash Box? Combination lock cash boxes: These cash boxes have a lock that is opened with a combination of numbers or letters. They offer the convenience of not needing a key. Digital lock cash boxes: These cash boxes have a lock that is opened with a digital keypad. They offer the convenience of not needing a key and provide quick access. What is a coin storage box used for? A coin storage box is manufactured to hold various types of coin holders, such as 2x2 and 1.5x1.5, slabbed coins, coin rolls, or mint and proof sets. Some manufacturers include Guardhouse, Lighthouse, NGC, PCGS, and Whitman. What is The Coin Box? The Coin Box is a full service coin and jewelry store located in Batesville, Arkansas. We buy, sell and trade gold & silver coins as well as new, old or broken jewelry. The Coin Box also buys, sells or trades other collectibles such as watches. Stop in often as our selection is constantly changing. What should you look for in a Cash Box? Security: Look for a cash box that has a sturdy, reliable lock and is made of thick, heavy-duty materials. If you are concerned about theft, you may want to choose a cash box with additional security features, such as pry-resistant construction or a reinforced lock. When should you use a Cash Box? Cash boxes are especially useful if you don't have another register or point-of-sale system, or if you're doing a mostly cash-only business, for example at a public market, a festival, or on a food truck. But cash isn't the only thing that can go in a cash box. Another common usage is for will-call tickets.
